

F.A.Q. WOHNUNGELD

Am I eligible for Wohngeld? And if so, where and how can I apply? Questions like these often arise regarding Wohngeld during your studies. In our abstract, we try to provide the answers to most of these questions. Please keep in mind, that these are only hints, therefore our list does not claim to be complete.

Note, international students: Please make sure to contact our social counselling service before submitting an application, as certain services may have a negative effect on your residence status.

WOHNUNGELD, WHAT IS THAT?

Wohngeld helps people with low incomes with their housing costs and must be applied for at the local housing allowance office (Wohngeldbehörde). However, students are rarely entitled to Wohngeld. The legal regulations can be found in the so-called Wohngeldgesetz (WoGG) and in the Wohngeldverordnung (WoGV).

IS IT POSSIBLE TO GET WOHNUNGELD IN ADDITION TO PARENTAL MAINTENANCE OR BAFÖG?

No! The basic requirement for students to be able to apply for Wohngeld is a BAföG rejection „on the merits“ and thus no entitlement to BAföG (see § 20 paragraph 2 Wohngeldgesetz). However, students who do not receive BAföG because their parents' and spouse's income or their own income/assets are too high are excluded from Wohngeld. In this case, the parents and spouses/life partners are obliged to pay maintenance.

An important exception could be: A member in the joint household is not a student, e.g. a child. The exception does not count for shared flats - with a contract in a shared flat you count as an individual!

STUDENTS CAN APPLY FOR WOHNUNGELD IF FOR EXAMPLE ...

- ✘ they are studying a second degree,
- ✘ they are pursuing doctoral studies,
- ✘ they change their course of study after the 2nd semester and then are no longer entitled to BAföG,
- ✘ they exceed their prescribed period of studies without a good reason,
- ✘ they have not been able to present sufficient benefits for a positive proof of performance after their 4th semester (according to § 48 BAföG),
- ✘ they receive BAföG exclusively as an interest-bearing loan for graduation.

Note: Before applying for Wohngeld, a BAföG application must ALWAYS be submitted! Whether you are or are not entitled to BAföG support is determined by the responsible office for educational support at the place of study. The refusal of BAföG is then considered as proof to the Wohngeldbehörde.

PLAUSIBILITY CHECK: WHAT MONTHLY INCOME DO I NEED TO PROVE?

Since Wohngeld is only a subsidy to the housing costs, the applicant must prove that sufficient income is available to cover the basic monthly living expenses. The purpose of paying Wohngeld is to enable eligible students to cover their monthly living expenses. This proof of coverage of living expenses must be provided monthly by the applicant in order to be entitled to Wohngeld.

It is difficult to calculate an exact amount for the cost of living, as this depends on many individual factors such as the number and age of household members. It is best to calculate different possibilities with the online Wohngeld calculator of the Senate Administration of Berlin. Select the federal state of Saxony at point A.1. At point A.2 please select your city/county.

WHAT COUNTS AS INCOME?

- ✘ credits (bank or private)
- ✘ wages earned from a job or profit from self-employment
- ✘ monthly withdrawals of the same amount from a savings account
- ✘ maintenance
- ✘ half-orphan pension
- ✘ (one-time) cash gift from family members
- ✘ own child benefit

Attention: Mixed financing is especially popular with students, e.g. loan, job, pocket money from grandparents. All income must be listed!

Note: A regular monthly income makes for an easier application procedure and minimizes the risk of recovery costs. When submitting the application, a forecast of the expected income for the coming year must be given. After the income is drawn, the assumed income is compared with the actual income in the reference months. There may then be an additional payment, but also a reclaim.

WHAT ABOUT THE PLACE OF RESIDENCE?

Wohngeld can be applied for the apartment where you have your „focal point of life“ – usually for the apartment where you have registered your main residence (§2 WoGG).
